

Hello Andrew,
Your reading is prepared!

“Card of the Day”

Card: The Devil (Upright position)

Your strengths and warnings

Be extremely careful – this is a very powerful and rough card! The Devil stands for a tempter who appears before us in an attractive mask. Everything that surrounds you today – including people and events – will have a different meaning, not the most obvious one.

The card stands for situations of you being dependent on something or someone. You will be showing weakness of will, your benevolent intentions will fail and you will also have to act against your principles.

Today you will have to face the dark side of your personality, you will have to handle temptation.

For example, someone might be persuading you to behave in an evil way or to turn your coat. It might come as an impulse, a motivation, a reaction to a certain event or discovering the side of your personality you never knew existed. You might feel jealousy, envy and lust for power.

Do not be angry with yourself and do not blame others. Do not suppress this impulse either. It is best to understand it and search for its cause.

You might be offered an easy and speedy solution for the problems that concern you. It is just a bait. If you are too impatient and naïve and agree to this offer, soon all your plans and dreams will be shattered. Never mind what others say. You must achieve success by your own efforts.

Today you will feel that you have fallen into your own trap. Look around – perhaps you are dependent on people or circumstances. This is the time to face your fears and all the things holding you back.

Remember, this card indicates you are playing with fire, you must be careful or you will get your fingers burnt. Do not take risks without a good reason.

Family and destiny

One of your relatives, most likely one of the younger relatives, has a secret. Talk to them about it.

Perhaps one of your loved ones is upset, crushed and depressed. They need your help.

In regards to health, the card symbolizes hardiness and stamina. It stands for your resistance to all sorts of diseases.

Love and relationships

The card warns about extremely attractive baits – infatuation, ample promises, unexpected tantalizing flirting, sensual passion and sex.

The card is telling you that your relationship is unreliable, insincere and can fall apart any minute. The card also warns you that we only sin for a moment and then repent for a lifetime. You might regret your affairs.

One or both partners can make strange and puzzling choices. You might have to deal with cruelty, violence or withering put-downs. You must resist quarrels breaking out between you.

Work and business

Your views and good intentions will be severely tried. There might also be temptation. It might take on a form of profitable schemes that can bring you money at the expense of your inexperienced and naïve business partner. Think if you want to jeopardize their trust and your reputation.

You might receive a lucrative offer going against your principles. It could be connected with weapons, drugs or environmental pollution. You will be craftily presented with every reason and excuse for accepting the offer.

In the professional environment, this lucrative and tempting card has a positive side. Should the occasion so demand, you must let the darker sides of your personality come through. If someone is being impertinent to you, you should be impertinent right back. If someone is trying to blackmail you, you now have an excuse to use blackmailing against that person. If you show how strong, willful, tough and uncompromising you are, your foes will surrender.

Card's general advice

With all that temptation, do your best to hold on to something positive. Do not go for offers that look too good and easy to be true, think about the future.
